

CCCBCA Hall of Fame Inductees 2011

Lou Pavlovich Jr.

publisher and editor of Collegiate Baseball Newspaper “The voice of amateur baseball”

Lou Pavlovich Jr. has been a leader in the promotion college baseball since 1975. He has written and photographed California community college baseball helping to promote the game and to educate those who participate in it. He has written countless articles about coaches, players and teams from our ranks.

Lou’s passion for the game and it’s participants comes through in his writings. He tries to bring innovations to light. Topics like vision training, mental approach, how combat training has implications for athletics and many others were introduced to thousands of readers by his newspaper.

We are grateful for his contribution to college baseball but specifically for his insistence on covering California community college baseball.

Tom Giacomini

College of the Redwoods

Tom was a significant member of the College of the Redwoods coaching staff for decades. He coached football, baseball and was athletic director while at College of the Redwoods.

Tom served as the college’s head baseball coach for 22 years. He won five conference championships and played in the DII state championship game three times.

During his time at College of the Redwoods Tom also coached the Humboldt Crabs, a summer collegiate team. He was head coach from 1987 – 1991 and then serves for several years on their board of directors. He also served on several youth baseball leagues board of directors in Eureka, CA

Tom served as the Athletic Director at the college for 11 years. During that time he also served on the COA’s Management Council.

We are excited to have a man of such character and leadership qualities as Tom Giacomini in our Hall of Fame